BG Group Wins Getenergy Award with BTS Simulation

London, June 11, 2008 -- BTS, the world leader in customised business simulations and other discovery-based learning solutions, announces that client BG Group plc (BG Group), a global integrated gas major, has been recognised by Getenergy, an education and training trade group for the oil and gas industry, for making the most significant contribution to its staff learning and development in 2007, with the implementation of "Business Discovery", a business simulation program developed together with BTS. Getenergy awards, open to any energy company, were designed to help promote the organisation's goals of improving the capabilities in the exploration, production and transportation of energy and to work towards a sustainable global energy industry.

"We're pleased and proud to be the winners of the Getenergy award," said BG Group's Learning and Development Manager, Mark Benians. "Business Discovery has played an important role in BG Group, by quickly and effectively improving employees' understanding of our organisation's strategic business model."

Over the past two years the highly customised simulation has given more than 500 BG Group employees around the world the experience of running their own gas company, with all its inherent challenges and opportunities. Participants, competing in teams, act as managers of the company over an 18-year period, assessing country entry, bidding for licences, exploring and appraising prospects and developing reserves. Business Discovery assesses teams on their ability to commercialise the reserves they produce through selling into existing demand, creating demand through transmission and distribution, power and Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) projects, while always keeping in mind the importance of HSSE (health safety, security and the environment) and Corporate Responsibility investments.

"BG Group has met the challenge of aligning its widespread managers to its strategy, creating excellence through teamwork and building its energy value chain expertise through Business Discovery, with impressive results," said BTS UK MD Joel Sigrist. "I commend the BG Group team on this prestigious award and their forward-thinking approach to talent development and corporate responsibility."
